Making Waves: Love, Adventure, and (Really) Cramped Quarters on the High Seas Suzanne Westover

In this hilarious, wildly entertaining memoir, a young graduate searches for meaning and direction on the high seas, without so much as a nautical compass. When Suzanne Westover finished college, like many recent grads, she wound up with a mindless job. Then fate intervened when she stumbled upon a rerun of The Love Boat. That's when she recognized her true destiny: To get a job on board a luxury liner and become the next Julie McCoy – cruise director extraordinaire! And she did, and now she chronicles her adventures, detailing a young woman's transformation and transition into adulthood. As she struggles to get her sea legs, Suzanne introduces readers to some wacky passengers at the same time that she provides a fascinating behind-the-scenes look at what really goes on beyond the Lido deck. Like all great cruises, MAKING WAVES also gives arm chair travelers a chance to experience some wonderful ports of call – including an African safari. Wicked, funny, revealing, this is one trip you'll want to book.
