Campaigns of the One Hundred and Forty-Sixth Regiment, New York State Volunteers, Also Known As Halleck's Infantry, the Fifth Oneida, and Garrard's Tigers (Classic Reprint) Mary Genevie Green Brainard

The church in a little country village of Central New York, where I livedo formed a Ladies Aid Society to work for the soldiers. All the old linen that had been saved for years by otu mothers, was brought out and the girls scraped the lint from it for use in the hospitals. We made quilts, knit mittens, and packed boxes that were distributed through the Christian Commission. That was fifty years ago, but it is still fresh in memory. It was war, dreadful war then as it is now, but in our own beloved land. When the call came for men in the early sixties, many of my friends and acquaintances answered promptly and marched to the front. It is the experiences of one of the regiments that went from my own neighborhood that I have tried to relate in this volume. What a pity that Curran was not spared to relate in his own graceful language the story of his regiment! The Fifth Oneida has no historian of its own. It has been my pleasure to know many of the officers and men of this valiant regiment, and I have often heard them recount their adventures. As a labor of love, therefore, and not for gain, I have endeavored, during the past few years, to gather together their fragments of stories and crystallize them into this narrative. Many have aided in the work. To give credit to all, whose kindly suggestion or bit of evidence has been of help, would be impossible in this short space. Major A. I. King has been a constant help.
